Since 1989, Lyssy & Eckel has worked continuously to improve the performance of our deer feeds. Deer feed studies of short duration are not effective in proving long term product performance. For 18 years Lyssy & Eckel has conducted continuous research on the same scientific breeder deer herd. New ideas are tested for an entire growing season in order to assess their impact on our feed's performance. Due to the confined nature of a scientific breeder herd, we are able to closely monitor product performance and determine the nutritional requirements of whitetail deer. We have tested various percentages of protein, different sources of protein, protein solubility, multitudes of protein combinations, ever higher concentrations of trace minerals, specific rumen stimulants and many calcium to phosphorus ratios. As a result, every year many of the highest scoring scientific breeder deer in Texas have been fed Lyssy & Eckel Feed. Yes, genetics and age are critical, but the key to maximizing genetics is proper nutrition.

From the early days of the scientific breeder industry in Texas, top breeders have trusted Lyssy & Eckel to provide the nutrition that
